4. The summit's call for "an independent Palestinian state" is obviously incompatible with the Reagan initiative and will be a problem. There is a way around this, however, if all sides accept the principle that independence can be a long term option for the West bank only after an extended transitional period (10-15 years) of linkage with Jordan. Israel could retain some veto right over independence (it will always have the military option to intervene).

5. The key is how the Arabs interpret Fez. It appears that the Saudis coaxed Syria into accepting a modified Fahd plan and a pro-Iraqi stance on the Persian Gulf war in return for postponing action to formally return Egypt to Arab ranks. The trade-off was the most the moderates probably could have hoped for.
